
Title: Song of Honesty

Author: by Canto Canzone

More than it hides, a mask reveals,
And more than it hushes, tells
That it is not what it
conceals,
But how beneath, the Truth e'er dwells.
For an unTruth is all
but a shade,
Half-seen, yet still
half-not there,
And to dwell forever
in deceit
Is to skulk in shadow
and despair.
Yet in the end, the Truth will blaze:
Naught escapes the light of day,
And all will stop, and all will gaze
When at last the mask
will fall away.
So hold thy face unto
the sun --
The Honest one has naught to hide -- Nor regret such as
thou hast done:
Let Honesty e'er be thy guide.